FELLOWSHIP DISSERTATIONS

All rights reserved.

These dissertations are made available by the WCF. The copyright remains with the WCF. Permission is granted to reproduce for personal and educational use only. Commercial copying, hiring, lending is prohibited.

The dissertations published are as submitted by the candidate for the Fellowship Examination. The dissertations have been accepted by the WCF Examiners to allow progression to the examination, and are published, without corrections, following the award of the Fellowship to the candidate.

The dissertations are the uncorrected original version as submitted, published after successful award of the Fellowship. No reference is made to the defence that the author may have made for the dissertation during the examination process, which now includes a formal presentation on the dissertation.

Some published dissertations have been in existence for a considerable period of time, and in a number of cases may not reflect current thinking. As such the information they contain may need to be treated with caution. The WCF does not necessarily support the views expressed by the authors, nor necessarily agree with all of the content.

Copyright Notice

Copying parts of a literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work or of a typographical arrangement of a published edition for the purpose of research or private study is allowed under the following conditions:

- The copy is made for the purposes of research or private study.
- The copy is made for non-commercial purposes.
- The source of the material is acknowledged.
- The person making the copy does not make copies of the material available for a number of people.

Copyright 'exceptions' are a legal defence for using copyright works without the rights holder's permission. There are exceptions which could apply to higher education, but be cautious about relying on them. They will only apply in limited circumstances and are subject to a test of fairness. The concept of fair dealing is an important one for education and research in the UK, but is often confused with fair use which is actually a doctrine from US law. Both fair dealing and fair use effectively serve the same function to allow fair use of copyright works for societally beneficial purposes but the UK system is more specific and restrictive.

You are allowed to copy limited extracts of works when the use is non-commercial research or private study, but you must be genuinely studying (like you would if you were taking a college course). Such use is only permitted when it is 'fair dealing' and copying the whole work would not generally be considered fair dealing.
